Before You Begin

Most marriages do not break because of one big event.

They wear down slowly — through the same argument repeated for the tenth time, through a silence that lasts three days, through two people sleeping in the same bed and feeling completely alone.

Indian tradition looked at this closely, and it did not treat marriage as a matter of luck. It treated it as a relationship governed by specific planets, each ruling a specific part of a couple's life together. Venus rules love and attraction. Jupiter rules the sanctity and stability of the marriage. Mars rules anger and conflict. The Moon rules emotional understanding. When one of these is disturbed, the trouble it produces has a recognisable shape — and a remedy.

HOW THIS BOOK WORKS

Chapter 2 helps you identify which planet is behind your specific problem — not marriage problems in general, but the one happening in your home. Then you go straight to that chapter.

You do not need a birth chart. You do not need a pandit. Almost every remedy here uses ordinary household items and costs less than a hundred rupees.

THREE THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW BEFORE YOU START

First — this book will not teach you to control your partner. People search for vashikaran and similar practices to force a husband or wife to obey them, and this book contains none of it, deliberately. Every serious tradition warns that binding another person's will damages the one who does it, and beyond the tradition there is a simpler truth: a relationship where one person is controlled is not a happy marriage, whatever else it may be. Everything in this book works by changing your conduct, your home and your patience — which, as it turns out, is also the only thing that has ever actually changed a marriage.

Second — you do not have to be married for this to apply. Most of what follows is about two people sharing a life: the fighting, the silence, the money, the families, the trust. That is the same whether you have been married twenty years or are engaged and already arguing about the wedding. Where a remedy is specifically for a married household — the bedroom Vastu, the in-laws chapter, Mangal Dosh before a wedding — it is marked as such, so read past it if it is not yours yet.

Third — one person can start. You may be reading this while your husband or wife has no interest in any of it. That is fine. Almost every remedy here works when done by one person alone. Chapter 13 has the joint remedies for when you are both willing, but do not wait for that day.

And an honest limit, stated clearly. These are traditional spiritual practices, not proven science, and there are situations they are not for. If there is violence, threat, or serious abuse in your marriage, no remedy in this book is the answer, and I will not pretend otherwise. Chapter 15 covers this properly. Please read it, even if you think it does not apply to you.

For everything else — the fighting, the distance, the misunderstanding, the family interference, the slow drifting apart — this book has something for you to do.

Let us begin.

Chapter 1: The Four Planets That Rule Your Marriage

In Vedic astrology, marriage is not governed by a single planet. Four of them share the work, and each one produces a different kind of problem when it is disturbed. Learn these four and you will be able to identify almost any marital difficulty by its signature.

VENUS (Shukra) — Love, Attraction and Comfort

What it rules: romance, physical attraction, affection, comfort at home, the wife (in a man's chart), pleasure, beauty.

When Venus is disturbed, you see: loss of attraction, no romance left, no physical closeness, the home feeling cold and joyless, a partner who no longer makes any effort, attraction towards someone outside the marriage.

The signature: "We live like roommates."

JUPITER (Guru) — Stability, Respect and Sanctity

What it rules: the institution of marriage itself, the husband (in a woman's chart), children, wisdom, the moral weight of a commitment.

When Jupiter is disturbed, you see: delayed marriage, difficulty having children, loss of respect between the couple, the marriage feeling meaningless, one partner who no longer takes the commitment seriously.

The signature: "There is no respect left."

MARS (Mangal) — Anger, Passion and Conflict

What it rules: energy, courage, temper, physical passion, disputes.

When Mars is disturbed, you see: constant fighting, shouting, arguments that escalate within seconds, harsh words, ego battles, small disagreements becoming wars. This is where Mangal Dosh belongs — Chapter 3.

The signature: "Every conversation becomes a fight."

MOON (Chandra) — Emotional Understanding and Peace

What it rules: the mind, emotions, mental peace, the mother and mother-in-law, the feeling of being understood.

When the Moon is disturbed, you see: emotional distance, feeling unheard, mood swings, mental stress carried home from work, a partner who cannot express what they feel, interference from mothers on either side.

The signature: "He is here, but he is not really here."

The 7th House — the house of marriage

Beyond the four planets, Vedic astrology places marriage in the 7th house of the birth chart — the house of the partner, of union, and of anything you enter into with another person.

You do not need to read a chart to use this book, but it helps to know the principle: a difficult 7th house produces recurring difficulty in partnership, and the remedy is directed at whichever planet is causing that difficulty. Chapter 2 will get you to the same answer without a chart.

The one thing to understand about all four

Notice something about the list above. Venus is strengthened by how a man treats the women in his home. Jupiter is strengthened by respect. Mars is calmed by control of one's own temper. The Moon is steadied by listening.

The tradition's remedies for marriage are not accidental. They point, every one of them, at the behaviour of the person doing the remedy. That is not a modern reinterpretation — it is what the texts actually prescribe, and it is why they were considered to work.

Chapter 2: Find Your Problem

Read the eight situations below. Tick whichever ones describe your marriage right now. Then go to the chapter listed.

1. We fight constantly

Every conversation turns into an argument. Voices rise within a minute. Old matters get dragged up. Somebody says something cruel and then it takes three days to recover.

Planet: Mars. → Chapter 4

2. There is no love left, only routine

No fighting, but no warmth either. No touch, no compliments, no interest. You share a house, a bank account and children, and nothing else.

Planet: Venus. → Chapter 5

3. He/she does not understand me

You explain and they do not hear it. You are upset and they do not notice. You feel emotionally alone inside your own marriage.

Planet: Moon. → Chapter 6

4. The families are the problem

Mother-in-law, father-in-law, brothers, sisters, relatives. Interference, comparisons, complaints, taking sides. Your marriage has an audience.

Planets: Moon and Jupiter. → Chapter 7

5. Money is destroying us

Fights about spending, saving, salary, family expenses, debts. One is careless, the other is anxious. Every month has the same conversation.

Planets: Venus and Jupiter. → Chapter 8

6. There is no physical closeness

Physical intimacy has stopped or become mechanical. One wants it, the other avoids it. Nobody talks about it.

Planet: Venus. → Chapter 9

7. There is a trust problem

Suspicion. Checking the phone. A third person, actual or feared. A lie that has never been resolved.

Planets: Rahu and Venus. → Chapter 10

8. Marriage is not happening at all, or ours is stuck in delays

Proposals break. The wedding keeps getting postponed. Everything about the marriage moves slowly.

Planets: Jupiter and Saturn. → Chapter 11

If you ticked several

That is normal — marital problems come in clusters, and one usually feeds the others. Do not attempt everything at once.

Pick the one that is causing the most pain today. Do only that for 40 days. In most homes, when the loudest problem quietens, two or three of the others turn out to have been symptoms of it.

Chapter 3: Mangal Dosh – The Truth About Being "Manglik"

More Indian marriages have been blocked by this one word than by any other, and most of what is said about it is exaggerated. Let us take it seriously and also take it calmly.

What Mangal Dosh actually is

A person is called Manglik when Mars sits in the 1st, 2nd, 4th, 7th, 8th or 12th house of their birth chart. Mars is the planet of anger, energy and aggression. The traditional reasoning is straightforward: with Mars in these particular houses — which govern the self, the family, the home, the partner, longevity and the bed — its heat is directed into married life, producing conflict.

What the tradition says it causes

Frequent quarrels, a hot temper in the marriage, ego clashes, delayed marriage, and in severe combinations serious discord.

What it does not mean

Here is what an honest astrologer will tell you, and what a frightened family usually never hears:

Mangal Dosh cancels itself in many ordinary situations. The classical texts list several conditions under which it does not apply at all — among them, when both partners are Manglik, when Mars sits in its own sign or is aspected by Jupiter, and after a certain age (traditionally 28, when Mars is considered to mature). Astrologers differ on the details, but every school agrees that cancellations exist and are common.

It is one factor out of many. A chart has nine planets and twelve houses. To reduce an entire compatibility question to one word is not astrology — it is a shortcut, and usually a commercially convenient one.

It has been badly overused. Enormous numbers of people are told they are Manglik on a quick reading, and a great deal of fear and a fair amount of money has been generated by it. Please be careful about who tells you this and what they then want to sell you.

And most importantly: countless Manglik people have long, happy marriages. If Mangal Dosh worked the way it is popularly described, that would be impossible.

The traditional remedies

If you have been told you are Manglik, these are the classical remedies. They are also simply good Mars remedies, and they will help anyone with a temper problem in their marriage.

DAILY:

- Recite the Hanuman Chalisa — the principal remedy for Mars, and the most widely practised in India
- Chant Om Angarakaya Namah, 108 times

TUESDAYS:

- Visit a Hanuman temple; offer red flowers, sindoor, and a mustard oil or ghee lamp
- Give red masoor dal, jaggery and red cloth in charity

- Keep a Tuesday fast if you are able
- Vegetarian food only

TRADITIONAL PRACTICES YOU MAY BE TOLD ABOUT:

- Kumbh Vivah — a symbolic marriage to a peepal tree, a banana tree or a clay pot before the real marriage, to absorb the dosha. Widely practised. If your family wants it and it gives them peace, there is no harm in it.
- Mangal Shanti Puja — performed by a priest.

A note of caution on both: these are legitimate traditional practices, and they are also where the largest amounts of money are extracted from frightened families. Nobody needs to spend lakhs of rupees on a Mangal remedy. If a price is being quoted that would hurt you to pay, you are being sold fear rather than a remedy.

The remedy the texts actually emphasise

Mars is the planet of anger. Every classical source that prescribes a Mars remedy attaches the same instruction to it:

CONTROL YOUR TEMPER.

Traditional teachers state plainly that Mars remedies performed by a person who continues to lose their temper produce nothing at all, because a strengthened Mars without control simply becomes more destructive. This is not a modern softening of the tradition — it is the tradition's own position.

So if you are Manglik and worried about your marriage, here is the honest summary. Do the Hanuman Chalisa. Do the Tuesday charity. And then do the part that actually decides the outcome: when the argument starts, be the one who does not raise their voice.

That is the whole remedy. Everything else supports it.

Chapter 4: When You Fight Constantly

PLANET: MARS (ANGER) — SUPPORTED BY MOON (PEACE)

What is happening

Mars rules heat, energy and conflict. When Mars is disturbed in a household, arguments do not stay small. A comment about dinner becomes a fight about respect. A question about money becomes an accusation about family. Both people are reacting from heat, and neither is really listening.

The pattern is always the same: one person says something sharp, the other returns it harder, and within ninety seconds you are both saying things you will regret and neither of you can stop.

Daily remedies

BOTH PARTNERS, OR WHOEVER IS WILLING:

1. Hanuman Chalisa, once daily. The primary remedy for Mars in the entire Indian tradition.
2. Om Angarakaya Namah, 108 times.
3. The water rule: the moment your voice starts to rise, stop and drink a full glass of water before saying the next sentence. Treat this as part of the remedy, not as separate advice. For Mars, it is the remedy.

Tuesday remedy

- Visit a Hanuman temple together if possible; separately if not
- Offer red flowers and sindoor; light a mustard oil lamp
- Give red masoor dal and jaggery in charity
- Feed a stray dog or a monkey
- Vegetarian food only; no alcohol
- Do not discuss any serious matter on Tuesday. Traditionally, Tuesday is Mars's day and its heat runs strongest. Postpone difficult conversations to Wednesday or Friday.

Household remedies

- Keep the south of your home clean and well-lit
- Remove broken, rusted or sharp iron objects from the house — old blades, damaged tools, broken scissors. Mars settles into these.
- Keep a red cloth at home, but not in the bedroom
- Keep sweet things in the house and offer them to each other. Sweetness cools Mars faster than anything else in the tradition.
- Do not keep weapons, or images of violence and war, in the bedroom

Moon support — for peace of mind

- Monday: offer water on a Shivling; both partners chant Om Namah Shivaya
- Wear white on Mondays
- No screens for an hour before sleep
- Keep water clean in the house; fix every leaking tap

The conduct that matters most

The tradition names this directly, so this book will too.

In every fight, one person has to stop first. Not because they were wrong, and not because they lost — but because somebody has to, and a fight where both people wait for the other to stop first does not end, it only pauses.

Be that person. Traditional teachers treat this as a direct Mars remedy for the one who does it, and it is the fastest-acting practice in this entire book.

Four more, all classical:

- Never say the unforgivable thing. Every couple knows the sentence that would really wound the other. In anger it becomes very tempting to say it. Do not. The tradition treats speech spoken in anger as the deepest damage a person can do to their own Mars.
- Never bring in the families. The moment "your mother" enters an argument, it stops being solvable.
- Never argue at night, and never go to sleep in the middle of an argument. Say clearly: "Let us finish this tomorrow morning." Then actually finish it.
- Never argue in the bedroom. This appears in Chapter 12, but it belongs here too. It is the single most repeated instruction in the tradition regarding married couples.

The 40-day practice

Every day for 40 days:

- Hanuman Chalisa

- The water rule, every single time
- One thing said out loud that you appreciate about your partner

That third one is not decorative. In a household running on Mars, the appreciation stops long before the love does, and restarting it changes the temperature of a house faster than any other single act.

Chapter 5: When There Is No Love Left, Only Routine

PLANET: VENUS (LOVE, ATTRACTION, COMFORT)

What is happening

This is the quiet problem, and in many ways the harder one. There is no fighting. There is also no warmth. You are two people managing a household — bills, children, schedules, relatives — with nothing personal passing between you.

Venus rules attraction, affection, beauty and comfort. When Venus weakens in a home, the romance does not end in one dramatic moment. It simply stops being renewed, and slowly there is nothing left but logistics.

Daily remedies

1. Om Shukraya Namah, 108 times.
2. Keep yourself clean and well presented — for your partner.
Venus is the planet of beauty, and the tradition is very direct that letting yourself go inside a marriage weakens it. Dress well at home sometimes, not only for outsiders.
3. Say one genuinely kind thing to your partner every day.
Specific, not general. Not "you're a good wife" — "you handled that call with your brother really well."

Friday remedy

- Wear white, pink or light colours

- Offer white flowers, curd or white sweets at a temple; many worship Lakshmi on Friday
- Buy something small for your partner. It does not need to be expensive — flowers, their favourite sweet, something they mentioned wanting. Friday is Venus's day and the tradition specifically prescribes gifts to the spouse on it.
- Give curd, rice, white sweets or white cloth in charity
- Clean the house thoroughly. Venus does not settle in an unclean home.
- Avoid sour food and non-vegetarian food

Household remedies — this is where Venus lives

Venus is the planet of the home's beauty, and these matter more than any mantra in this chapter:

- Keep the bedroom clean, pleasant and uncluttered. No files, no laundry piles, no boxes, no dust.
- Keep fresh flowers in the bedroom or the living room
- Use a pleasant fragrance in the house — incense, a mild perfume, anything clean-smelling
- Remove everything broken. Cracked mirrors, torn bedsheets, chipped furniture, non-working items. Venus rules beauty, and broken beauty in a home is treated as a direct affliction to it.
- Keep the south-east of the home clean — Venus's direction
- Keep silver in the house
- Eat at least one meal a day together, without phones. Venus rules shared enjoyment; a household where nobody eats together has a starved Venus.

The conduct that matters most

- Respect the women of the house. For a husband, this is the Venus remedy. Never speak harshly to your wife, and never humiliate her in front of anyone — not family, not children, not friends. The tradition states that Venus is strengthened or damaged directly by this, and no ritual overrides it.
- Appreciate out loud. Venus grows in a person who notices and says so.
- Do not compare your partner to anyone. Not to a relative, not to a friend's spouse, not to who they used to be.
- Give time, not only money. Many husbands believe that providing well is the same as loving well. Venus does not accept the substitution.

The 40-day practice

Every day for 40 days:

- Om Shukraya Namah, 108 times
- One specific kind thing said out loud
- Fifteen minutes together with no phones — tea, a walk, sitting on the terrace, anything

Every Friday for 40 days:

- One small gift
- The house cleaned properly
- Fresh flowers

Most couples in this situation report the same thing at the end: the affection did not need to be created from nothing. It needed to be given a place to return to.

Chapter 6: When Your Partner Does Not Understand You

PLANET: MOON (MIND, EMOTIONS, UNDERSTANDING)

What is happening

You are speaking and they are not hearing you. You are upset and they do not notice. You explain something important and they answer the surface of it and miss the whole point.

The Moon governs the mind and the emotional connection between two people. When it is disturbed, both partners can be entirely sincere and still fail to reach each other. This is rarely about love. It is almost always about two minds that are too crowded, too tired or too distracted to receive anything.

Daily remedies

1. Om Namah Shivaya, 108 times before sleep. Shiva wears the moon; this is the classical Moon remedy and the most accessible.
2. Om Somaya Namah, 11 times.
3. Drink water from a silver or clean steel glass.
4. Ten minutes of talking with no phones, every day. Not about children, money, or work — about how the day actually felt. If you have not done this in years, it will be awkward for about a week. Do it anyway.

Monday remedy

- Wear white
- Offer water or milk on a Shivling at a Shiva temple, saying Om Namah Shivaya. Do this together if your partner will come.
- Give rice, milk, curd or white cloth in charity
- Many keep a Monday fast
- Serve your mother, and encourage your partner to do the same for theirs. The Moon is the mother; this is the strongest Moon remedy there is.

Household remedies

- Keep the north-east of your home clean, open and uncluttered
- Fix every leaking tap. Traditional Vastu links dripping water directly to a leaking, restless mind.
- Keep drinking water clean and covered; never let a stagnant container sit anywhere
- Keep white flowers in the house
- Sleep with heads towards the south or east, never north
- Silver in the house, and silver worn if possible
- No screens in the bedroom. The Moon rules the mind's ability to rest, and the tradition's remedies for mental peace cannot compete with a phone in a dark room.

The conduct that matters most

- Listen without preparing your reply. This is the whole difficulty, in most homes. While your partner speaks you are already assembling your answer, so you hear the first sentence and none of the rest.

- Do not solve. Ask. When your partner describes a problem, most of the time they are not requesting a solution — they are asking to be accompanied in it. "That sounds exhausting, what happened next?" reaches further than the best advice you have.
- Never make your partner cry deliberately. The classical texts state directly that causing tears — particularly a woman's — damages the Moon of the person who caused them.
- Be gentle in speech. A harsh tongue and a peaceful home cannot exist in the same house.
- Ask one real question a day. "How was your day" gets a one-word answer. "What was the most annoying part of your day?" gets a conversation.

The 40-day practice

Every day for 40 days:

- Om Namah Shivaya, 108 times before sleep
- Ten minutes of talking, no phones, no screens
- One real question asked, and the answer listened to fully without interrupting

Every Monday:

- Water offered on a Shivling
- White clothes
- Rice or milk given in charity

Chapter 7: When the Families Are the Problem

PLANETS: MOON (MOTHERS, EMOTIONS) AND JUPITER (ELDERS, RESPECT)

What is happening

Mother-in-law comparisons. Complaints carried back and forth. Relatives with opinions about your household. One partner taking their family's side against the other. Two people who might be fine together, constantly refereeing between the people around them.

The Moon rules mothers and the emotional atmosphere of a home. Jupiter rules elders, respect and the moral structure of a family. When these are disturbed, a marriage stops being a private thing between two people and becomes a public matter with a committee.

Daily remedies

1. Om Namah Shivaya, 108 times — for the Moon, and for peace in the household.
2. Om Brihaspataye Namah, 108 times — for Jupiter, for respect and for family harmony.
3. Speak well of your in-laws, out loud, at least once. Even if it costs you. Especially if it costs you.

Monday and Thursday remedies

MONDAY (MOON):

- Offer water on a Shivaling
- Wear white
- Serve your own mother, and speak respectfully to your mother-in-law
- Give rice or milk in charity

THURSDAY (JUPITER):

- Wear yellow; eat yellow food
- Give chana dal, turmeric and bananas in charity
- Touch the feet of the elders in both families. This is the Jupiter remedy, plainly stated.
- Water a peepal tree and light a lamp beneath it
- Feed a cow with jaggery and chana dal

Household remedies

- Keep the north-east of the home clean and open — for both the Moon and Jupiter
- Keep a tulsi plant at home; water it daily and light a lamp beside it in the evening. Traditionally the strongest remedy for peace in a household.
- Keep religious books in the home, respected and never on the floor
- Keep a turmeric root in yellow cloth in the home
- Eat together as a whole family at least once a day where possible

The conduct that matters most

This chapter's conduct section is really the whole chapter.

- Never criticise your partner's parents to them. Whatever they themselves say about their own family, you do not get to join in. The moment you do, you become the outsider attacking their blood, and they will defend the very person they were just complaining about.
- Do not carry complaints between two households. Every complaint you relay becomes permanent; every one you absorb quietly disappears in a week.
- Present a united front. Whatever you disagree about, disagree about it privately. The moment a family sees a gap between the two of you, that gap becomes the place where everyone puts their opinion.
- Give respect regardless of whether it is returned. The Jupiter remedy is respect towards elders, and the tradition does not attach a condition to it.
- Protect your partner in front of your own family. This one is difficult and it is the most important. If your mother criticises your wife in front of you, your silence is an answer. Defend her, gently and immediately.

A practical instruction the tradition supports

Where circumstances allow it, the tradition holds that a married couple needs its own space — its own room at minimum, its own home ideally. The 7th house is the house of the couple; the classical texts treat a marriage with no private territory as a marriage under permanent pressure.

If separate living is not possible, then create separateness within the home: your own room kept as your own, one meal a day taken just the two of you, and a rule that household disputes are settled between you before anyone else is consulted.

Chapter 8: When Money Is Destroying the Marriage

PLANETS: VENUS (COMFORT, SPENDING) AND JUPITER (WEALTH, WISDOM) — WITH MERCURY (EARNING)

What is happening

One of you spends and the other worries. Salary arrives and disappears. Money goes to relatives and creates resentment. Every month has the same conversation, and it is never actually about money — it is about control, fear, and who gets to decide.

Venus rules comfort and expenditure. Jupiter rules wealth, its accumulation and its right use. Mercury rules earning and transactions. Money fights in a marriage almost always trace back to a disturbance in one of these three.

Daily remedies

1. Om Brihaspataye Namah, 108 times — Jupiter, for wealth and wisdom.
2. Om Shreem Mahalakshmyai Namah, 108 times — for prosperity and household harmony.
3. Never speak about money in anger. Traditional teachers hold that money discussed with resentment does not stay in a house. Set a fixed time to discuss finances calmly — Wednesday or Friday, not late at night, not in the bedroom.

Thursday and Friday remedies

THURSDAY (JUPITER):

- Wear yellow; give chana dal, turmeric and bananas in charity
- Keep a turmeric root wrapped in yellow cloth in your cash box or locker
- Feed a cow with jaggery
- Water a peepal tree, light a lamp

FRIDAY (VENUS AND LAKSHMI):

- Clean the entire house, especially the entrance
- Offer white sweets and white flowers at a temple
- Give curd, rice or white cloth in charity
- Buy something small and useful for the home

Household remedies for money

- Never let your purse, wallet or cash box be completely empty. Keep at least a small note in it always.
- Keep the cash place clean and orderly — no torn notes, no old bills mixed in, no clutter
- Keep the north of the home clean — the direction of wealth
- Keep a tulsi plant; water it daily and light an evening lamp
- Keep the entrance of the house clean and well-lit. Lakshmi enters through the door; the tradition treats a dirty or dark entrance as an obstacle to money entering the home.
- Fix all leaking taps. Leaking water, leaking money — this appears in every traditional Vastu text.

- Do not keep broken items, dead clocks, or non-working appliances

The conduct that matters most

- Both partners must know the full financial picture. Secrecy about money is treated in the tradition as a direct affliction to Jupiter, which rules honest wealth. In practice, hidden money is the single most reliable destroyer of trust in a marriage.
- Do not humiliate a partner who earns less. Whether it is the wife or the husband, whoever earns less should never be made to feel they must ask permission. Jupiter is damaged by this specifically.
- Give in charity together, from the household's money. Both Jupiter and Venus are strengthened by it, and it changes how a couple thinks about what they have.
- Never make your partner ask for money. Set a household system — a shared account, a fixed amount, whatever suits you — but do not make one adult petition another.
- Keep your word about money. Mercury rules transactions; a promise about money that is broken damages it directly.

A practical structure that the remedies support

Sit down on one Friday and do this once:

1. Write down everything that comes in and everything that goes out. Both of you looking at the same paper.
2. Decide together on three amounts: what is saved, what is spent on the household, and what each of you may spend without consulting the other.
3. Fix one day a month to review it, calmly, in daylight.

The tradition asks you to keep your money place clean and orderly. This is the same instruction applied to the household's accounts, and most money fights in a marriage disappear once both people are looking at the same page rather than guessing at each other's.

Chapter 9: When There Is No Physical Closeness

PLANET: VENUS (ATTRACTION, PHYSICAL LOVE) — SUPPORTED BY MARS (ENERGY) AND MOON (EMOTIONAL SAFETY)

What is happening

Physical closeness has stopped, or become infrequent and mechanical. One partner wants it and feels rejected; the other avoids it and feels pressured. Neither talks about it, and the silence itself becomes another wall.

In Vedic tradition, physical intimacy between a married couple is not treated as a shameful subject. Venus governs it as a natural and necessary part of a marriage, and its absence is treated as an affliction to be remedied, not a private failure to be hidden.

Daily remedies

1. Om Shukraya Namah, 108 times.
2. Look after your health, your cleanliness and your appearance.
Venus is the planet of physical attraction, and the tradition is direct that neglecting this weakens it.
3. Non-romantic physical contact, daily. A hand on the shoulder, sitting close, a hand held while watching television. In a marriage where closeness has stopped completely, ordinary touch has usually stopped too — and it is the easier one to restore first.

Friday remedy

- Wear white or light colours
- Offer white flowers and white sweets at a temple
- Give curd, rice and white items in charity
- Buy something for your partner
- Clean the bedroom thoroughly

The bedroom — this is the heart of this chapter

Traditional teachers place more emphasis on the bedroom than on any mantra for this problem. Chapter 12 covers it fully; these are the essentials:

- Absolutely clean, uncluttered, and pleasant. No files, no laundry, no boxes under the bed, no clutter on surfaces.
- No arguments in the bedroom, ever. The most repeated instruction in the entire tradition regarding couples.
- No phones, no laptops, no television. A screen in a dark bedroom has replaced more marital intimacy in the last fifteen years than any planet ever did.
- Fresh flowers and a pleasant fragrance.
- Nothing broken — especially no cracked mirror, and no mirror directly facing the bed
- Light, warm colours — pink, cream, light green. Avoid black and dark blue in the bedroom.
- No images of gods or deceased family members in the bedroom. Traditionally kept out of the couple's room.
- A clean, unbroken, comfortable bed. Do not use a broken or creaking bed; do not store junk beneath it.

Mars and Moon support

- Mars (energy): Hanuman Chalisa daily; physical exercise; reduce heavy and excessively spicy food
- Moon (emotional safety): Om Namah Shivaya before sleep; no screens an hour before bed; ten minutes of real conversation daily

The Moon part matters more than it looks. Physical closeness rarely returns to a marriage where the two people are not speaking to each other properly. Emotional safety comes first, and everything else follows it.

The conduct that matters most

- Talk about it, once, kindly. Not as an accusation, not in the middle of a fight. Choose a calm moment: "I miss being close to you. Can we talk about it?" Most couples in this situation have never had this conversation even once.
- Never criticise your partner's body or appearance. The tradition treats this as a direct affliction to Venus, and in practice a single such remark can end physical closeness in a marriage for years.
- Never use intimacy as a punishment or a reward. It damages Venus, and it damages trust more.
- Rebuild the ordinary closeness first — time together, conversation, touch without expectation. Venus is the planet of pleasure, but also of comfort and ease, and it does not return to a home where two people are tense with each other.

If the difficulty is physical or medical

Please see a doctor. Many causes of this problem are entirely physical — hormonal, medication-related, stress-related, or a treatable condition — and they are common, ordinary, and usually straightforward to address.

There is no shame in it and no remedy substitutes for it. The tradition's own position on health is consistent: upay supports treatment; it does not replace it.

On children

Where a couple is trying to have children, the traditional remedies are Jupiter's — Thursday practices, chana dal and turmeric in charity, respect towards elders, and worship of Shiva and Parvati together on Mondays.

They should be done alongside proper medical care, never instead of it. Difficulty conceiving is common, medically well understood, and often treatable. Please see a doctor early rather than late, and let the remedies support your patience through what is usually a long and stressful process.

Chapter 10: When There Is a Trust Problem

PLANETS: RAHU (DECEPTION, ILLUSION, SUSPICION) AND VENUS (LOYALTY)

What is happening

Suspicion has entered the house. Perhaps something actually happened. Perhaps nothing did and the fear alone is doing the damage. Phones are being checked. Questions have a second meaning. Every explanation sounds rehearsed.

Rahu is the planet of illusion and deception — and importantly, of the appearance of deception. Under a disturbed Rahu, a marriage can be destroyed by a suspicion that was never true, because Rahu's damage comes as much from confusion as from any actual event.

Daily remedies

1. Durga Chalisa, or Om Dum Durgaye Namah, 108 times. Durga traditionally governs Rahu and protects a household from deception and fear.
2. Om Shukraya Namah, 108 times — Venus, for loyalty and love.
3. Do not act on a suspicion for 24 hours. Rahu's entire method is to make something appear to be what it is not. A day's delay before confronting anything is itself a Rahu remedy, and it will save you from most of the accusations you would regret.

Weekly remedies

SATURDAY (RAHU):

- Give mustard seeds, black gram, or a grey blanket in charity
- Feed birds at sunset
- Keep a coconut at home; in serious difficulty, flow a coconut in running water
- Worship Durga

FRIDAY (VENUS):

- White flowers and white sweets at a temple
- Curd and rice in charity
- Clean the house; fresh flowers

Household remedies

- Keep the south-west of the home clean and heavy
- Remove broken electronics, dead gadgets and tangled wires. Rahu rules technology and settles into that clutter — and in most modern marriages, technology is exactly where the trust problem is living.
- Keep the house free of dark, cluttered, unused store rooms
- Keep silver with you
- Keep a tulsi plant and light a lamp beside it each evening

The conduct that matters most

- Do not lie about small things. Trust does not usually break over one large deception. It breaks over a series of small unnecessary ones, each of which teaches your partner that your account of things cannot be relied upon. Rahu is built entirely out of small lies.

- Be transparent without being interrogated. If your partner is anxious, volunteering information works; being caught not volunteering it does not.
- Do not check your partner's phone. Whatever you find or fail to find, the act itself confirms that the marriage now runs on surveillance instead of trust, and that is very hard to come back from.
- Do not accuse without certainty. A false accusation, once made, cannot be unmade.
- If something did happen — end it completely and be honest. Venus is damaged by betrayal more than by any other single act, and Rahu is fed by the concealment that follows. The tradition's position is that a wrong which continues cannot be remedied while it continues. No mantra works around it.
- If you are the one who was wronged and you have chosen to stay — decide fully. Constant re-punishment is not forgiveness, and it will destroy the marriage more slowly but just as completely. Either forgive it and put it down, or accept honestly that you cannot.

An honest note

This chapter is the hardest one in the book, and it is worth saying plainly: astrology cannot tell you whether your partner is being unfaithful. Anyone who claims to read that from a chart or a palm is guessing, often for money, and often causing enormous damage to a marriage where nothing was wrong.

The remedies here are for steadying your mind and your household so that you can see the situation clearly and act on what is actually true rather than what fear is showing you. That is what they are for and that is all they are for.

If trust has broken badly, please consider speaking with a counsellor – together if possible, alone if not. It is not a failure or a shame. It is what people do when something important is worth saving.

Chapter 11: When Marriage Is Delayed or Everything Moves Slowly

PLANETS: JUPITER (MARRIAGE) AND SATURN (DELAY)

What is happening

Proposals come and break. The engagement drags on. The wedding date keeps moving. Or, for a couple already married, everything in the marriage moves slowly — decisions, children, the house, the plans that were made years ago and never happened.

Jupiter rules marriage, especially in a woman's chart. Saturn rules delay. When Jupiter is weak, the marriage does not form; when Saturn is heavy, it forms but moves slowly.

Daily remedies

1. Om Brihaspataye Namah, 108 times — Jupiter, the marriage planet.
2. Hanuman Chalisa — for Saturn, for obstacles, for patience.
3. Om Namah Shivaya — Shiva and Parvati are the traditional couple worshipped for marriage. Many recite this daily specifically for this purpose.

Thursday remedy — the main one

- Keep a Thursday fast, if you are able. The most widely practised traditional remedy for delayed marriage in India.

- Wear yellow; eat yellow food
- Give chana dal, turmeric, yellow cloth and bananas in charity
- Water a peepal tree and light a lamp beneath it
- Feed a cow with jaggery and chana dal
- Visit a temple; offer yellow flowers and turmeric
- Touch the feet of elders and teachers. The core Jupiter remedy.

Monday remedy

- Offer water and milk on a Shivling, saying Om Namah Shivaya
- Worship Shiva and Parvati together — traditionally the practice for a good marriage, done by Parvati herself in the story
- Wear white; give rice and milk in charity
- Serve your mother

Saturday remedy — for the delay itself

- Feed crows and stray dogs
- Give black sesame, blankets and food to the poor and elderly
- Light a mustard oil lamp under a peepal tree on Saturday evening
- Hanuman Chalisa

Household remedies

- Keep the north-east of your home clean, open and uncluttered — Jupiter's direction. Traditionally, a heavy, dark or cluttered north-east is directly linked to delayed marriage.
- Keep a tulsi plant, watered daily, with an evening lamp
- Keep a turmeric root in yellow cloth at home

- Keep religious books in the home, respected
- Remove clutter and broken items generally

The conduct that matters most

- Respect teachers and elders. The primary Jupiter remedy. Contact a teacher who mattered to you.
- Do not speak badly about marriage, about married people, or about anyone's spouse. The tradition holds that contempt for the institution weakens Jupiter's ability to give it to you.
- Be patient without becoming bitter. Saturn delays; it rarely denies. Bitterness during a delay is what turns a Saturn phase from slow into damaging.
- Do not make a desperate decision. Traditional teachers warn specifically against this: a marriage entered in panic because of family pressure or age anxiety produces a much longer problem than the delay did. Saturn's own lesson is that a thing done properly late is better than a thing done badly early.

For families reading this

If someone in your family is facing delayed marriage, please understand something. The pressure applied at home — the comparisons, the relatives' questions, the daily reminders of age — is usually causing more suffering than the delay itself.

The Jupiter remedy for a family in this situation is straightforward and it is stated in the tradition: respect the person, do not humiliate them, and stop making their life a public matter. A household that does that produces better marriages than one that does not.

Chapter 12: Vastu for a Happy Marriage

Vastu Shastra treats the home as a living thing with an effect on the people inside it. Whatever one makes of the underlying theory, the instructions below are the traditional ones for a couple, and a striking number of them are also simply good sense about how two people live together.

The bedroom — the most important room

Direction: the south-west is traditionally the best place for the master bedroom. It is the heaviest, most stable corner of a home, and it is said to give a marriage stability. Avoid the south-east for a couple's bedroom — it is the fire corner and traditionally linked to arguments.

THE BED:

- Sleep with your head towards the south or east. Never north.
- Use one single mattress, not two joined together. Traditionally, two mattresses on one bed are said to create separation between a couple — and whatever the mechanism, couples do report it.
- The bed should be solid, unbroken and not creaking
- Do not store junk under the bed. Especially not old, broken, or emotionally heavy items.
- The bed should not be directly in line with the door
- No beam directly above the bed. If unavoidable, cover it with a false ceiling or move the bed.

MIRRORS:

- No mirror facing the bed. This is the strongest mirror instruction in Vastu, and it is said to create a third presence in the marriage.
- No cracked mirrors anywhere in the house. Remove them today.

WHAT MUST NOT BE IN THE BEDROOM:

- Images of gods and goddesses — traditionally kept out of a couple's room
- Photographs of deceased family members
- Images of water — waterfalls, rivers, the sea — which are said to create emotional instability
- Images of violence, war, or single lone figures
- Broken or non-functioning items
- Files, work papers, and clutter
- A television, a laptop, and — if you can manage it — phones

WHAT SHOULD BE IN THE BEDROOM:

- Light, warm colours — pink, cream, light green, peach. Avoid black and dark blue.
- Pairs of things. A pair of pillows, a pair of lamps, a picture with two figures. Traditionally, pairs support a couple; single objects and lone figures are avoided.
- Fresh flowers and a pleasant fragrance
- Good, soft lighting. Not harsh white tube light.
- Cleanliness above everything else

The rest of the home

The entrance: keep it clean, well-lit and uncluttered. Lakshmi is said to enter through the main door, and a dark or dirty entrance is treated as an obstacle to everything good coming into the home. Fix a broken doorbell, a stuck lock, a squeaking door.

The kitchen: the south-east is the traditional direction. Keep it clean; do not leave dirty dishes overnight, which is linked in Vastu to arguments in the household.

The north-east: keep it clean, open, light and uncluttered. This is the corner of Jupiter and of peace. Do not put a toilet, a store room, or heavy furniture here where it can be avoided. A water source here is auspicious.

The south-west: keep it heavy and stable — the master bedroom, a heavy cupboard. Do not keep it empty or light.

Universal instructions for a household

These appear across every traditional source, and they need no belief in Vastu to be worth following:

- Fix every leaking tap. Leaking water is linked directly to leaking money and a leaking, restless mind.
- Remove everything broken. Broken furniture, cracked crockery, dead clocks, non-working appliances, torn bedsheets.
- Do not keep dead or dried plants. Water your plants or remove them.
- Keep a tulsi plant, watered daily, with a lamp beside it in the evening. The single most recommended household remedy in the tradition for peace in a home.
- Light a lamp in the house every evening at dusk.

- Do not let rubbish accumulate. Saturn settles into neglected, dirty spaces.
- Let light and air in every day. Open the windows in the morning.

The one Vastu rule that matters most

Of everything in this chapter, traditional teachers repeat one instruction above all others regarding married couples:

NEVER ARGUE IN THE BEDROOM.

The reasoning is that the room where a couple sleeps holds the atmosphere of what happens in it, and a room used for fighting stops being a place of rest for either person. Whether one accepts that as the room absorbing energy or simply as two people teaching their own nervous systems that their bed is a place of conflict, the instruction and its result are identical.

Move the argument to another room. Or, better, to the next morning.

Chapter 13: Remedies to Do Together

If both of you are willing, these are the traditional joint practices for a couple. They carry more weight in the tradition than remedies done alone — and they also do something that no solo practice can: they make the marriage itself the shared project, rather than one person's problem to fix.

Monday — Shiva and Parvati

The traditional divine couple of the Indian tradition, and the ones worshipped for a strong marriage.

- Visit a Shiva temple together on Monday
- Offer water and milk on the Shivling together — both hands on the same vessel
- Say Om Namah Shivaya together, 108 times
- Wear white
- Give rice, milk or white cloth in charity together

Parvati performed austerities to obtain Shiva as her husband. In the tradition, a couple who worship them together are asking for the same thing they already have — and the asking itself is the practice.

Thursday — Jupiter, for stability

- Both wear yellow
- Give chana dal, turmeric and bananas in charity together
- Water a peepal tree together and light one lamp between you

- Touch the feet of the elders in both families
- Feed a cow together

Friday — Venus and Lakshmi, for love and prosperity

- Both wear white or light colours
- Clean the house together. Not one person cleaning while the other watches.
- Offer white flowers and white sweets at a temple together
- Give curd and rice in charity together
- Buy one thing for the home together — even something small
- Eat a meal together, at a table, with no phones

Daily joint practices

These are the ones that actually change a household.

1. One meal together, every day, without phones. Venus rules shared enjoyment. A household where nobody eats together has a starved Venus, and the tradition treats a shared meal as a genuine remedy, not a nicety.
2. Light the evening lamp together. Two minutes at dusk. Light a diya, say a short prayer, whatever form suits your home. It marks the end of the working day and the beginning of the household's own time.
3. Ten minutes of talking, no screens. Not about children, money, or logistics. About the day.
4. Say one appreciation out loud. Each of you, every day, one specific thing.

5. Feed a stray dog or crow together. The universal remedy — Saturn, Ketu, obstacles of every kind — and it costs one roti.

The Vat Savitri and Karva Chauth traditions

Many households already keep these — Karva Chauth in the north, Vat Savitri in the west and elsewhere — where the wife fasts for the husband's long life and wellbeing.

If your household keeps them, keep them fully and with meaning. And a suggestion the tradition supports well: let the husband keep the fast too. In an increasing number of homes he does, and the tradition has no objection whatever to a man fasting for his wife's wellbeing. A one-sided ritual carries less weight in a marriage than a shared one.

The 40-day joint plan

If both of you will do this, do it properly.

EVERY DAY FOR 40 DAYS:

- One meal together, no phones
- Ten minutes of conversation, no screens
- One appreciation each, said out loud
- The evening lamp
- Your chosen mantra, 108 times

Every Monday: water on a Shivaling together Every Thursday: yellow clothes, charity together, the peepal tree Every Friday: the house cleaned together, flowers, a meal at a table

And one rule that runs through all 40 days: no arguing in the bedroom, and no going to sleep in the middle of a fight.

Forty days. Then look back honestly at what changed.

Chapter 14: The Fastest-Acting Remedies

If your situation is urgent and you can only do a few things, do these. Traditional teachers prescribe them across almost every marital difficulty, and each one is free.

- 1. Hanuman Chalisa, daily. For anger, obstacles, fear, Mars and Saturn. The most widely practised remedy in India for a reason.
- 2. Om Namah Shivaya, 108 times before sleep. For the mind, for peace, for the Moon. Shiva and Parvati are the marriage deities; this reaches both purposes at once.
- 3. Feed a stray dog and a crow, every day. Saturn and Ketu. Removes obstacles. One roti.
- 4. Water a peepal tree on Saturday evening and light a mustard oil lamp beneath it. Saturn and Jupiter — for delays, heaviness, and long-standing difficulty.
- 5. Keep a tulsi plant, water it daily, light a lamp beside it each evening. The classical household remedy for peace in a home.
- 6. Clean the bedroom completely. Today. Venus. The single fastest-acting household remedy for a marriage in the whole tradition.
- 7. Fix every leaking tap in the house. The Moon and money. Ten minutes of work.
- 8. Remove every broken thing from your home. Cracked mirrors above all. Then broken furniture, dead clocks, torn sheets, non-working appliances.

9. Serve your parents, and encourage your partner to serve theirs. Sun and Moon. Stated across the texts as outweighing every ritual.

10. Stop first in the next fight. Mars. The fastest-acting practice in this entire book, and the hardest.

Chapter 15: When Remedies Are Not the Answer

This chapter matters more than any other in this book, and I would ask you to read it even if you are certain it does not apply to you.

Please read this if any of the following is true

If there is violence in your marriage. If your partner hits you, pushes you, throws things at you, or physically hurts you in any way — even once, even when drunk, even when they apologised afterwards and it has not happened since.

If you are threatened. Threats to hurt you, to hurt your children, to hurt themselves if you leave, to take your children away, to destroy your reputation.

If you are being controlled. Not allowed to see your family or friends. Not allowed access to money. Your phone monitored. Being told where you may go and who you may speak to.

If you are being systematically humiliated, insulted, or made to feel worthless, day after day.

If there is dowry harassment, or pressure and threats from your in-laws about money or property.

If your children are being harmed in any way.

In any of these situations, no remedy in this book is the answer. Not the mantras, not the charity, not the Vastu, not one more attempt at patience.

I am telling you this plainly because I am aware that books like this one are sometimes used — by a suffering person, or by their family — as a reason to endure something that should not be endured. "Do the remedy for forty more days. Be more patient. It is your karma."

IT IS NOT YOUR KARMA, AND THIS BOOK WILL NOT BE USED THAT WAY.

What to do instead

If any of the above describes your situation, please reach out for real help. In India:

- Women's Helpline: 181 — a national number, available at all hours
- National Commission for Women: 7827-170-170
- Police: 100 or 112
- Childline (for children): 1098
- Speak to someone you trust — a family member, a friend, a doctor, a lawyer. Do not carry this alone and do not let shame keep you silent.

If it is not safe for you to make a call, tell someone in person. A doctor's appointment, a visit to a relative, a conversation with a neighbour you trust — any of these is a place to say it out loud.

YOUR SAFETY COMES BEFORE YOUR MARRIAGE. ALWAYS. THERE IS NO TRADITION, NO ASTROLOGY AND NO REMEDY THAT SAYS

OTHERWISE, AND ANYONE WHO TELLS YOU DIFFERENTLY IS MISUSING THE TRADITION, NOT REPRESENTING IT.

When to see a counsellor instead of a book

Even where there is no danger, there are situations that need a trained person rather than a remedy:

- Addiction – alcohol, drugs, gambling
- Depression or serious mental health difficulty in either partner
- A betrayal that neither of you can move past on your own
- Repeated cycles you can both see clearly and neither can break
- Any situation where one of you has stopped wanting the marriage entirely

Marriage counselling is not a Western import and it is not an admission of failure. It is what people do when something important is worth saving and they have run out of ways to save it themselves. Many Indian cities have good counsellors, several work online, and it is far cheaper than most of the remedies people are sold when they are desperate.

And one more honest thing

Sometimes a marriage cannot be saved, and no remedy will change that.

If you have tried genuinely, over a long period, and the marriage is causing serious and continuing harm to you or your children, then ending it is not a spiritual failure. The tradition's own texts recognise the difference between a difficulty to be endured and a situation to be left, and no useful reading of karma requires a person to be destroyed by their marriage.

I hope that is not your situation. For most people reading this book, it is not — most marriages that feel unbearable are actually two tired, unheard, ordinary people who have stopped speaking to each other properly, and those marriages recover more often than anyone expects.

But if it is your situation, please know that this book is not asking you to stay.

THE DAILY FIVE

1. Hanuman Chalisa
2. Om Namah Shivaya, 108 times before sleep
3. One meal together, no phones
4. Ten minutes of real conversation
5. One appreciation said out loud

Final Word

Every remedy in this book asks something of you rather than of your partner.

That is not an accident, and it is not a modern reinterpretation of the tradition to make it more comfortable. Read the classical prescriptions carefully and you find the same instruction underneath all of them. Venus is strengthened by how you treat the women in your home. Jupiter by the respect you give. Mars by the temper you control. The Moon by how well you listen.

The planets, in the tradition's own account, respond to conduct. And conduct is the only part of a marriage any of us actually controls.

So do the mantras. Keep the Thursday fast. Clean the bedroom, water the tulsi, feed the dog, light the lamp. These practices have carried Indian households through difficulty for a very long time, and they carry something real — they give a worried person something to do each morning, they build patience through repetition, and they turn a vague unhappiness into a specific daily action.

And alongside them, do the harder part. Be the one who stops first. Say the appreciation out loud. Ask the real question and listen to the whole answer. Defend your partner in front of your own family. Put the phone down at dinner.

Forty days. Start tomorrow morning.

This book presents traditional Vedic remedies and Vastu practices as they have been handed down in India for generations. It is offered for spiritual guidance and cultural understanding. These practices are not a proven science and are not a substitute for professional medical, psychological, legal or marriage counselling. If you are experiencing abuse, violence or threat, please contact the Women's Helpline (181), the police (100 or 112), or a trusted person immediately – your safety comes first.
